The Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals agreed with our position on the Alabama DUI law in an opinion released Friday. It again proves that even a stopped clock is right twice a day. A number of Alabama judges, including District Judge Steve Blair right here in Coffee County, have been dismissing these cases because of the 1994 legislative amendment which was intended to include boat operators under the drunk driving law. The cases before the appeals court were dealing with, "did they or didn't they," repeal the automobile part of the law when they added boat operators. Most anyone can read copies of both laws and understand the ivory tower decisions to dismiss the cases. The amendment said the law was "to read" and not "to include" ... the boat operator restrictions. It is also real easy for conservative non-legal eagle/red blooded defenders of the constitution to agree with the appeals court that the Legislature never intended to revoke the vehicular DUI law by passing the boating act ... Odds are this ain't over yet, as it will surely be appealed to the Alabama Supreme Court. For now however, the DUI law for automobile drivers is again valid in all Alabama courts until (or unless) a higher court does a reversal. We are grateful for this, anything else is just too disruptive to society. Recent cases dismissed in Coffee County can also be reinstated, if city attorneys and district attorneys choose to do so.

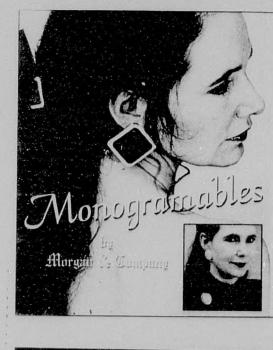

It is always a shock when someone you know dies suddenly or is killed in an auto accident. Elba policeman Greg Gay was not widely known in town, quietly working the night shift and not being a native. However, Elba folks were shocked when they awoke Monday to the news he had been killed in the line of duty while they slept, The one car accident which yanked the life from this newly married husband shouldn't have happened, but it did. Our prayers go out to his family, co-workers and friends.

There is a storm coming this way ... or maybe there is a storm coming this way. The hurricane which was predicted to hit South Florida Tuesday night just might cross Florida and head up the Gulf in our direction later this week. The possibility of that happening has got area folks making adjustments. The Elba Clipper fax machine got more than one cancellation of Wiregrass outdoor events planned for the weekend. Each one blamed Hurricane Erin, which might wind up in Texas, or even Mexico. Pray that each of you is here next week reading your newspaper ... and pray the newspaper survives the coming storm also!

The Alabama Legislature has completed the 1995 regular session and WE, THE CITIZENS survived. The idea is not original in this column but it is hard not to agree that no one is safe as long as the lawmakers are in session. Seriously, all things considered, the just completed session of the Alabama legislature apparently was pretty good. Odds are, any of us would have done something or another differently, but hopefully those were minor differences of opinion and not major goofs by our elected officials. The Elba Police Department, beginning Tuesday, July 25, 1995, in-vestigated the following incidents: stage - 5.70 feet (6:15 a.m.); Alarm

There are subjects like that today. Saying you are for or against "affirmative action" puts you in a camp. It identifies the speaker's commitment. Columnist Bill Maxwell last month questioned the sincerity of the Southern Baptist Convention's statement on racism, because it was not accompanied by op-position to what he labeled "the Republicans' cynical attack on affirmative action." There is no room in Maxwell's column for the possibility that a person might genuinely oppose racism and its effects, and at the same time genuinely question the prosperity of the current programs covered by the title 'affirmative action." Government programs have real effects, both ec-Government onomic and moral, and there are people who genuinely care about them. My own concern can be illustrated by the story of the older lawyer who said, "When I was a

But, as I grew older and more experienced, and, by comparison, my opponents were younger and less experienced, I won many cases I should have lost. So, on average, justice was done."

We cannot be satisfied with "average justice". An injustice to one is not corrected compensation to another. When affirmative action began in the 1960's, the average income, education and life expectancy of African-Americans evidenced a problem. But it was not merely a statistical problem. Doubling the incomes, for example, of Charles Barkley and Michael Jackson, though it would increase average minority income, would do nothing for justice. Justice is individual. We have a problem with effort to address problems of health, income and education, by focusing on those who are affected, the statistics will take care of themselves, and serve as an index of progress. If, on the other hand, we focus on correcting the statistics, we will miss the real problems. When a family member needs an operation, we spend the money on the operation. We do not spend it on other relatives, satisfied we have spent enough. The family is better off only when the specific person who needs the operation gets it.

Group thinking cannot solve individual problems. Each person is an individual, and justice demands that we treat him as one. Affirmative action began with a noble purpose. It has today too often devolved into a numbers game rather than an accomplishments effort. And, human beings are not numbers.

PASTOR'S CORNER

Rev. Mart Gray - Elba First Baptist Church

I've had those kind of days. You've had those kind of days. Recently, was reminded that even five year olds have those kind of days. ary of 1863, he was called to Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago, which had only 100 members. De Baptiste, an impressive preacher, made Olivet a haven for freedmen emigrants, and operated day and evening schools for them. By 1868, he had increased the membership to over 480 members and replaced the rented frame church with a brick structure capable of seating 800 and costing $18,000, thus making Olivet Chicago fire of 1874, De Baptiste built a three-story structure by door opening and the patter of little feet as they scampered across the den floor. I met him in the kitchen. His eyes were wide as saucer plates. Anticipation had turned to anxiety. "Dad, Dad..." The words would hardly come fast enough. We took each other's hand as he rushed me out the door to see the sight. There it was...headlights flashing...horn sounding...blinkers blinking. It was about to take off, at least in the eyes of a still stunned five

Dad took the keys and remedied the automobile attack with one simple chine-gun fire words just exactly how he had followed my directions to a tee. Then all...well, it all broke loose. Still fearful that he might have to pay a price for all this havoc, he explained it all again. I sat and listened. Finally there was a break for a breath and I began to explain how he had confused Quite relieved to know there was some plausible and inconsequential explanation for all this display of chaos, he looked up and smiled with an innocent, "OOHH!" We shared a good laugh, then went inside to explain it

How many times has it happened to you? You are off on a well-intended nission...everything is go...then, all of a sudden the whole world sounds an alarm. Calm becomes chaos in an instant. We've all experienced it. But, more importantly, how do we react to it? All too often we follow the examole of my five year old and panic. (Ironically, it was his hitting the panic outton that caused his panic, rather than the intended sequence!)

Jesus encountered many times in his earthly life when he could have hit he panic button. When he found himself being asked questions that were ng...when mobs tried to take his life...when he was put on the spot to erform miracles...when Satan tempted him in the desert...all these times would have pressed most of us to the panic point. But our Lord was a shining example of composure and peace. He dealt with his problems head on, but with great diligence. He turned to the Father for assistance. He invoked Scripture to defend his position. He sought refuge with friends. He agonized in the Garden of Gethsemane, but panic he did not.

Our world is filled with seemingly innocent buttons that in reality set off all sorts of alarms. May God give us the grace to pause in our chaos and seek the hand of our Father, hear the words of our Savior, and know the comfort of the Holy Spirit as we disengage the source of our fear.

WILLIAMSON HOPING FOR TV EXPOSURE

Elba softball standout Tim Williamson will get the chance to make it on nationwide TV later this summer when he will get to try his luck at a special "Home-Run Derby" held at Detroit's Tiger Stadium. The Top 15 home-run hitters in softball have been invited to swing for the fences at the major league baseball park, and Williamson is one of the fifteen that will take his cuts. The final four will make it on ESPN for national coverage, and Williamson hopes that being the only lefty in the bunch will give him an advantage. Hey, hitting at a place called Tiger Stadium should be an advantage in itself for an ex-Tiger like Williamson.

COACHING CHANGES STILL UNDERWAY

The 1995 football season is getting closer by the day, but it seems to make little difference to the various coaches that are still making changes at a record pace. Here are just the latest ...

NEW BROCKTON will have its third coach in three years, as Dan Klages resigned after only one-year at the helm to move on to Ashford, and basketball coach Alan Thrasher will assume the duties. The lastsecond resignation shocked everyone at New Brockton, except those who knew Klages would jump at the chance to return to his home town. OPP will have only one holdover on its staff when the '95 season kicks off, and he will be in basketball. Coach Shayne Wasden found numerous holes when he took the Bobcat job, but has now filled all the slots, and the folks in Opp may need an extra program just to know the coaches.

GOSHEN will be led this fall by former-Ariton coach Julius Head. Coach Head has the reputation as a mover, but this seems like a good move for the veteran coach, who is a proven winner. The new coach at Ariton will be 27-year-old Douglas Vickery, who comes from being an
